Other (Biographical Only):

Following military service, I arrived in Alaska in 1973 with little. I got an education, married Sally (lifelong Alaskan), began a family and built our log home on a Chickaloon homestead. Here we raised our sons, who became successful men shaped by solid family values, healthy community, home schooling and good public schools.

Statement:

Alaska is a great place and can be even better if we address the serious challenges we face. Recent state fiscal policies and poor decision making are hurting us. A fresh approach is needed and that's why I am running for the Senate.

Lawmakers in Juneau are not solving our problems. There is little desire to balance our recent state budgets, which have record setting deficits. One of our most critical needs, education for our kids, is fraught with uncertainty and last minute legislative bickering. The list goes on. We are not developing enough family wage jobs. We roll out enormously expensive speculative projects when we have limited resources to maintain our existing infrastructure. Where are solutions for our depleted fisheries, advancing a natural gas pipeline, and high costs of electricity? Are we adequately protecting the Permanent Fund for our children and grandchildren? We can and must do better. Together, we must face these issues to build a sustainable growing economy.

As a lifelong Independent, I am a strong believer in the value of individual and local community participation in government. Each one of you has valuable knowledge and ideas the legislature needs to hear. I'm ready and able to work with you to accomplish things in an open, transparent and responsive way.

My past successes are a result of listening, finding solutions, and building trust. I'll bring my record of hard work, independent and creative thinking, practical teamwork, and common sense to the Alaska Senate.
